Agriculture to promote economic development, conservation, research, and education in Indiana. In addition, other revenue will be allocated for property tax relief. The bill authorizes slot machines at Indiana's two racetracks.

Also, on the opening day of the 2006 legislative session, Speaker of the House Brian C. Bosma complied with the recent court ruling and ended a 188 year old ritual of giving an invocation each day before session. Legislators took to the floor of the Indiana House of Representatives 10 minutes before the official start of session to pray together for guidance.

The prayer met the guidelines of Judge Hamilton as it was delivered before the start of the legislative session and away from the Speaker's podium. This will be the standard procedure of prayer while the Speaker takes the additional steps to overturn this decision in a higher court.

As the defendant, Speaker Bosma is appealing this decision to the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago and has vowed to take this case to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

I would like to add that House Republicans are upholding their promise in making Indiana state government more open and accessible to the Indiana taxpayers. As part of the Open Government initiative started by the House Republicans last year, the House proceedings can be viewed online at <http://www.in.gov/legislative/session/video.html>. In addition to House proceedings being online, the important Ways & Means Committee hearings, where fiscal matters are discussed, and select committees from one of the four House Committee rooms located in the basement of the Statehouse will now be broadcasted over the Internet.

As the session progresses, I encourage you to take advantage of new openness at the state capital. I also hope to continue working hard for constituents and to bring job and economic growth to the state of Indiana. Please contact me with any questions or concerns you may have this session.

(STATEHOUSE) January 6, 2005 - The 2006 legislative session has started and we are taking great strides to bring job growth, economic development, and property tax relief to the state of Indiana. House Republicans are tackling a number of issues and continuing their agenda from last year, which is being considered the most aggressive agenda in a generation. We must continue to move Indiana in the right direction. It is important that we get Indiana back to fiscal stability, while keeping our constituents' needs in mind.

House Republicans have outlined an agenda for this year's session on property tax relief, job creation, education, local government efficiency, and energy relief. I am deeply committed to achieving these goals and making our state a great place for Hoosiers to live and work.

During this short session, I am authoring House Bill 1077, which outlines a plan to appropriate $25 million to the Department of

PREVENT CARBON MONOXIDE POISONING

Northern Indiana Public Service Company (NIPSCO) reminds customers to learn the symptoms of and preventative actions for avoiding carbon monoxide poisoning.

Carbon monoxide is an odorless, colorless, tasteless and non-corrosive gas created whenever combustion takes place without sufficient oxygen. Carbon monoxide is relatively harmless in open spaces, but can be very poisonous if allowed to accumulate. Malfunctioning appliances or improper venting are major sources of carbon monoxide.

Symptoms
NIPSCO encourages customers to recognize the symptoms and take preventative action to prevent carbon monoxide poisoning. Carbon monoxide may cause any or all of the following: headaches, dizziness, nausea, vomiting, irregular breathing, rapid heartbeat, ringing in the ears, seeing spots, fatigue, confusion, memory loss, loss of coordination, blurred vision.

feeling ill or tired at home, but fine away from home, loss of consciousness, coma, seizures, cardiac arrest and respiratory failure.

Other household symptoms include foul-smelling or stale air, the smell of exhaust fumes, a yellow/orange flame on gas burners, furnace or water heater chimney, furnace or water heater flue vent or fireplace, or large areas of condensation of water vapor on walls or windows.

What to do

Get into fresh air quickly if you suspect carbon monoxide poisoning and contact 911 immediately. If you suspect a natural gas leak, leave the home immediately and contact 911 and NIPSCO from a neighbor's home.

Prevention tips

- Purchase carbon monoxide detectors.
- Make certain all fuel-burning equipment (coal, wood, natural gas, Kerosene, and fuel oil) is installed, inspected and operated properly.
- Hire a professional to install appliances, carefully follow the manufacturers' instructions and maintain equipment according established guidelines.

- Do not cut off or restrict combustion air sources to appliances.
- Provide adequate indoor ventilation when using fireplaces or unvented space heaters.
- Never burn charcoal indoors or in an enclosed space.
- Clean chimney and check for blockage, especially with wood-burning fireplaces and stoves.
- Open garage before starting vehicle.

Pushing the "Easy Button"

Bishop Michael J. Coyner

One of the most interesting gifts I received during the Christmas season was an "Easy Button" from one of our younger clergy here in Indiana. If you have seen the TV commercial for Staples, then you have seen one of those buttons. It is bright red, with the word "easy" on it, and when you push it a recorded voice says, "That was easy."

I have had some fun with that button already. I used it with both Cabinets, and right after we had a very difficult discussion and worked hard to make a difficult decision, I pushed the button and we all heard "That was easy." It brought a good laugh.

I would like to have an Easy Button for my work as bishop here in Indiana. If I could push that button and make things easy, here is what I would do:

1. I would push the Easy Button for every pastor who is feeling discouraged, or confused, or not very appreciated by his/her congregation. I would push the Easy Button and that pastor would be reminded of God's call, be affirmed for the many good things accomplished in their ministry which are unseen, and be filled with a sense of God's presence blessing that pastor's life and ministry.

2. I would push the Easy Button for every layperson who is struggling to find their way in the midst of the world's confusion, and who is not finding much help from their local church. So many people I hear from are hoping that their pastor and their church and their faith will guide them through tough business decisions, through family problems, and through the myriad of social issues facing our world. I would push the Easy Button and they would find a caring church to support them, a pastor whose messages and ministry bless them, and a faith to guide them even through the ambiguities of life.

3. I would push the Easy Button for every youth and young adult who is struggling to know God's will for their life. In the midst of mounting pressures from a society which seems hell-bent on destruction and a world which seems unfair and unjust, I would push the Easy Button and those young people would hear God's voice calmly leading them into their life pathway.

4. I would push the Easy Button for every injustice in our state of Indiana and every injustice in our world. We seem surrounded by a culture which is not just apathetic to Christian values but actually antagonistic toward God's dream of peace, justice, harmony, and love. I would push my Easy Button and all injustice would cease as the world entered into a time of living within God's designs and purposes.

5. I would push my Easy Button and every local United Methodist Church here in Indiana would discover in a fresh way their call to mission and ministry for others in 2006. Rather than any church remaining stuck in a mode of self-preservation and negative thinking, my Easy Button would help them to be filled with God's power and purpose as they care for their own members but also move beyond their walls to care for all of God's people.

That's what I would do with my Easy Button. If only it were that easy.

May God bless you with a New Year of 2006 which is filled with God's answers - both easy and not so easy.

Letters To The Editor...

Letters to the Editor:

Intelligent Design: In 1980 the American Evolution Society meeting in Chicago concluded that there was no evidence of one species evolving into another, so they concluded that evolution must be based on the theory of the "hopeful monster", which is the mutation of one species into another. As yet, there is no evidence of a mutation in a species which is not a harmful one and which does not die within a generation.

Recently a scientist who had proclaimed to be an atheist, reviewing the DNA profile which can identify a person with a one in a trillion possibility of error, concluded that life must be the result of "intelligent design". To the National Education Association this sounds too much like "God", so they are determined not to allow this theory to be considered in public schools to compete with that of the "hopeful monster" (oops, evolution). In this effort, they are amply assisted by the Anti-Christian Litigation Union under the spurious doctrine of the separation of church and state, which only a very creative posturing could say is in the Constitution. This NEA and ACLU strategy is very contrary to majority opinion of our people.

Over the past fifty years this "death of God" movement, ably assisted by our monopoly dominant media, has given us a society in which a Merry Christmas, a Nativity Scene, and the Ten Commandments are proposed to be an insult by a small minority of people. (The 85% Christian majority will just have to "get with it".) As nature abhors a vacuum, so also with the supernatural. Should we be surprised then that, as we move God out, the Devil steps in, and we are told that there is no objective standard of good and evil. It is just what is right for you. If there is not God, there is no Judgment, so why worry.

Pornography is freedom of speech, but not Merry Christmas or a nativity scene, and don't dare mention the word sinful for certain actions, for this would be a hate crime. Children kill parents, teachers and other children; rape and murder of children and young women by serial killers, all of whom are into porn; certain minorities feel society victimizes them and so they are free to burn down the cities or thousands of cars as recently happened in France. And our "compassionate" rulers have virtually abolished the death penalty for even horrendous crimes. And of course, we must disarm our honest citizens (contrary to the Constitution) so as not to pose a threat to the criminals who would attack us. Or is it so a One World Government proposed by the United Nations and the Council on Foreign Relations (also known as "our invisible government") would not be opposed. The One World Government is, of course, what the UN, the European Union, and the Free Trade Area of the Americas (in process) is all about.

Over time, the discussions of the General Assembly have covered almost every topic imaginable. These topics usually come to the forefront voluntarily. However, the beginning of this session has brought an issue to the legislature because of a Federal Court injunction. Federal Judge David Hamilton has ordered Speaker Brian Bosma to instruct ministers and members to not include any references to any deity and more specifically singled out "Jesus Christ" to be excluded from the daily invocations on the House Floor. The judge orders that all prayers must be non-sectarian and very generic in nature. The Speaker responded that this is an intolerable decision that will be appealed to every higher court, but in the mean time, he will not defy the judge's order. Speaker Bosma's procedure is to simply offer opportunity for members to pray "unofficially" prior to the session in the back of the House Chamber. It is not a desirable situation, but it works. My hope is that this decision will be overturned.

Please understand this point; the media is giving this issue huge space and priority. As legislators, we are not dedicating much time to this issue. Most of us feel strongly about the issue, but we continue to work on legislation while allowing this procedure to work and the judicial system to address the appeal. In other words, the work for the procedural issues get worked out.

There are two issues that should dominate this short session: property tax protection and transportation funding. Because of past changes to the property tax structure, there are increases in store for property owners. Adjustments must be made to property tax bills for 2006. The goal is to provide taxpayers with protection this year, which means the legislature needs to act quickly!

Transportation funding also presents many problems to resolve during the 2006 session. On June 30, 2006, the state will be at the end of a bonding program and the funds for maintenance and new constructions will be greatly reduced. In order to stimulate economy and create jobs for laborers, machine operators, contractors and suppliers, a funding mechanism has to be found. Governor Daniels is promoting his "Major Moves" program - a proposal to lease the Indiana Toll Road for an extended time period and use proceeds to finance $2.8 billion dollars in approved highway projects. There are lots of questions to answer on this new concept in financing, but the Governor is traveling the state explaining how this can be done successfully. We should all listen carefully to the proposal and ask intelligent questions, because the most important thing to remember is that doing nothing is less than a poor option. If we don't take a collaborative approach to listen and learn about the Governor's plan, we will be faced with unpopular options like increasing the gas tax and then few alternatives remain. It is crucial for our state to nail down a funding mechanism so we can provide jobs for Indiana. Economic development is extremely difficult without a progressive program to build and maintain a quality infrastructure.
